

INTRODUCTION

The Clark Art Institute is a museum, a research center, and . . . a library! Home to more than 275,000 books, the Clark features one of the largest libraries dedicated to the study of art in the whole country.

Get to know the Clark's book collections as you assemble, write, and illustrate your own personal publication.

Marcantonio Raimondi, The Virgin Reading with the Infant Christ, c. 1511–14.
Bequest of Julius S. Held, 2004, 2004.13.28.

WHAT YOU'LL NEED

The Basics

- Several sheets of paper—printer paper works well!
- Scissors
- Pencils, markers, crayons, and other materials for writing or illustrating
- Tape

Bookmaking Bonuses

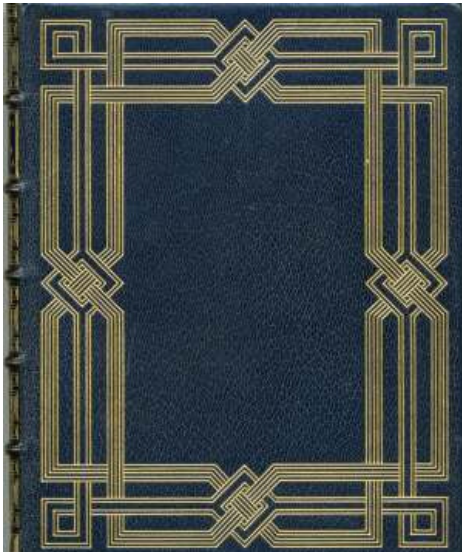

- Ribbon, twine, yarn, or string
- Hole puncher
- Stapler
- Cardstock or cardboard
- Stickers, colored tape, magazine cut-outs, and other embellishments

THE CLARK CONNECTS

THE ART OF BOOKMAKING

COLLECTION CONNECTIONS

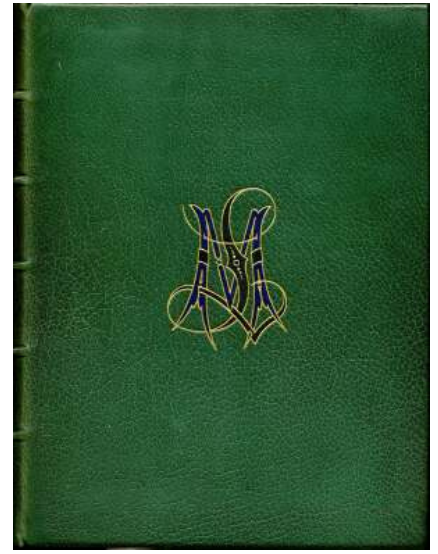

Let the bookmaking begin! As you think about how you'll make your book, take a look at these artfully designed examples from the Clark Library.

Cover of Ludovic Halévy, La famille Cardinal (Paris: Calmann Lévy, 1883). Robert Sterling Clark Collection of Rare Books.

Cover of Johann Wolfgang von Goethe, Faust, tragédie de M. de Goethe (Paris: C. Motte, 1828). Robert Sterling Clark Collection of Rare Books.

Cover of Paul Hervieu, Flirt, illustrated by Madame Madeleine Lemaire (Paris: Boussod, Valadon et Cie., 1890). Robert Sterling Clark Collection of Rare Books.

Cover Stories

Some of the books held by the Clark Library today came from founder Sterling Clark's personal collection. Instead of buying just any old book, Clark preferred to "wait for an extra fine copy in an extra fine binding." The Robert Sterling Clark Collection of Rare Books features many beautifully bound books like the selections pictured above.

How will you embellish your cover? You could draw a design with markers, crayons, and colored pencils; decorate with stickers, tape, and paint; or even glue on recycled aluminum foil to give your book a little sparkle.

WHAT DOES YOUR COVER DESIGN
SAY ABOUT WHAT'S INSIDE THE BOOK?

THE CLARK

CONNECTS

COLLECTION CONNECTIONS

Word Art

This nineteenth-century collection of nursery rhymes pairs photographs with handwritten text that dances, drops, and dangles on each page. Notice how the playful presentation of the text adds to the whimsical nature of the verse.

Whether you're scribbling in pencil or crafting careful calligraphy, the style of your text can help create a particular experience or emotion for your reader. What mood will the design of your words set? Will the mood differ from page to page?

N. Gray Bartlett, Mother Goose of '93 (Boston: Joseph Knight Company, c. 1893). The David A. Hanson Collection of the History of Photomechanical Reproduction.

THE ART OF BOOKMAKING

WILL YOUR BOOK INCLUDE PICTURES AND WORDS?
WILL IT TELL A STORY?

Eunice Coffin, Lace Instructions (Manuscript with Samples, 1859).
Mary Ann Beinecke Collection of Decorative Art.

Playful Pages

The Clark's Mary Anne Beinecke Collection of Decorative Art features a wide array of books about fabric and handicrafts, including some sample books with actual swatches of fabric inside them! This page from a sample book includes bits of lace with handwritten instructions to guide the reader through the process of making it.

Take a page out of these sample books by adding some surprising materials to your manuscript. Experiment with photographs, newspaper clippings, fabric, puzzle pieces, pressed flowers and leaves, bark, or anything else flat from nature or your home.

WHAT TEXTURES WOULD BRING YOUR STORY TO LIFE?

THREE WAYS TO MAKE A BOOK

1

Fold a piece of paper in half, short sides together. You've just made a four-page folio, a book with its pages created through a single fold! For a lengthier folio, lay several pages on top of each other before you fold. Wrap tape around the center crease on the front and back of the pages to keep your folio from falling apart.

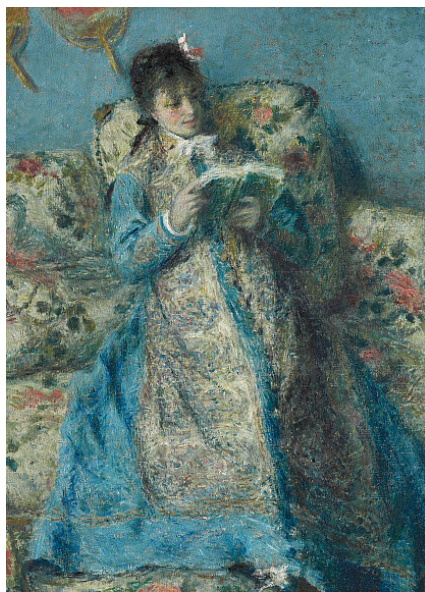

2

If you're short on paper (or just want a smaller book), try making a quarto, a book made of paper folded twice. Fold your paper in half, short sides together. Then repeat, folding short sides together again. At this point, your quarto should look a little more like a book! You just need to cut the pages apart. Cut along the top fold on each page, stopping just before you reach the center crease. This keeps the binding intact. Your finished book should have eight pages.

3

Eager to skip ahead to the writing and illustrating? You can always make a very quick book by punching a vertical row of two or three holes on a stack of unfolded paper of the same size and shape. (Remember, your book doesn't have to be rectangular!) Bind the book by looping ribbon, yarn, or string through each hole and tying to secure. If you don't have a hole punch, staple your book instead!

OTHER WAYS TO CREATE

Try out these techniques with different textures and types of paper. Based on the materials you have available, consider making the biggest and smallest books that you possibly can. You might cut paper to make petite pages, or tape it together to form giant ones. The shape and size of the finished book might inspire your writing or illustrations in different ways.

You can choose to make your book a one-of-a-kind, original volume or pretend you're a publishing house by creating a few copies of the same book. When you finish, spread some literary love by sending your homemade books in the mail to family and friends.